The Milwaukee, Wis., Physicians' Association will prepare a bill for the next legislature intended to stop the practice of kissing and stamping the habit as a blot on civilization and a menace to health and decency. SLIGHT CHANCE

Negro Boy To Have Bullet Removed From Skull By An Operation

Rassie Washington, the 17-year-old negro boy who was shot in the head with a pistol while in a row at a colored church near Edgott, Ky., Sunday evening, has been sent to the Home Infirmary, where the ball will be cut out by trephining the skull. The bullet entered the skull just above the left ear and, as Dr. Burt thinks, is lodged between the delicate linings of the brain, the dura and the pia mater membranes, producing the semi-conscious condition in which he has been since he was wounded. While his condition is critical, he has a slight chance for his life.—Leaf Chronicle.

Drives off a Terror.

The chief executioner of death in the winter and spring months is pneumonia. Its advance agents are colds and grip. In any attack by one of these maladies no time should be lost in taking the best medicine obtainable to drive it off. Countless thousands have found this to be Dr. King's New Discovery. "My husband believes it has kept him from having pneumonia three or four times," writes Mrs. George W. Place, Rawsonville, Vt., "and for coughs, colds and croup I have never found its equal." Guaranteed for all bronchial affections. Price 50cts. and $1.00. Trial bottle free at all druggists.

THE MOTOR CAR

Its Sudden Dash To Popularity
And Marvelous Manufacturing Success.

When the industrial history of the twentieth century is finally written, its most thrilling chapters will almost surely be those that tell the story of the motor car—its sudden dash to popularity, its marvelous manufacturing successes, and its costly tactical failures. So say men learned in the lore of the business world. Certain it is, at any rate, that no department of the world's manufacturing history has yet furnished so great an amount of industrial romance.

News of the latest feat of this kind comes, as one has learned to expect, from Detroit. In one week, a firm manufacturing annually an output marketed at $50,000,000, completely reorganized the executive personnel of its system of distribution and then, with the new organization in charge, scored a sales success during the first month, that eclipsed all its former records for a similar period.

How this was done, without in the least disturbing the progress of a busy selling season, is a story of vital interest to every business man. The firm is The Studebaker Corporation whose mammoth automobile division, manufacturing E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" cars, maintains a round dozen plants. The Studebakers market their product through a system of forty branch warehouses and service stations in the main trading centers. Each of these supplies cars direct to that part of the 2,200 Studebaker dealers in its territory. The branch managers make all contracts and, to practical ends, each is The Studebaker Corporation in his own region.

A combination of circumstances made it advisable, in the judgment of the Studebaker management, to eliminate a certain element in its sales department. The change involved the sales manager, his assistant and the managers of nearly a third of the firm's branches.

To the automobile world the emergency seemed unexpected. Such was, however, far from the truth. When Germany decided to go to war with France, General Von Moltke took from a certain pigeon hole in his desk a complete plan of campaign, drawn up months before. When his emergency came, General Manager Gunn of the Studebaker Corporation did virtually the same thing.

An experienced sales manager, Ernest R. Benson, was already in waiting. With him, as assistant, came Arthur I. Philp, also a man peculiarly fitted for his work. For every branch in which a change was necessary, there was ready the assignment of a manager, every appointee carefully schooled for his particular job.

The change was made during the first week of May. Almost on that exact date, the automobile buying public made a concerted onslaught on Studebaker dealers, which disposed of virtually every car on their floors, and this despite the fact that the company had made most generous provision for the expected rush. Several of the branches where changes were made, were among the sales leaders for the month.

Incident to the revision and harmonizing of the sales department, Sales Manager Benson announces a complete list of the new branch manager appointments.

All these men are now firmly established in their new positions, the change having been effected without, so far as known, interfering with the sale of a single car or the disaffection of a single dealer.

Could Shout for Joy.

"I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart," wrote C. B. Rader, of Lewisburg, W. Va., "for the wonderful double benefit I got from Electric Bitters, in curing me of both a severe case of stomach trouble and of rheumatism, from which I had been an almost helpless sufferer for ten years. It suited my case as though made just for me." For dyspepsia, indigestion, jaundice, and to rid the system of kidney poisons that cause rheumatism, Electric Bitters have no equal. Try them. Every bottle is guaranteed to satisfy. Only 50 cents at all druggists.

ANDROMEDA'S GREAT NEBULA

Most Astonishing Object in Heavens and Long a Mystery to Astronomers.

One of the most astonishing objects in the heavens is the great nebula in the constellation Andromeda, which is visible as a misty speck to the naked eye. It has long puzzled astronomers because, while its structure—a series of vast rings surrounding a central mass—suggests a gaseous constitution, its spectrum is continuous, resembling that of the sun. It has been suggested that it may be composed of stars constituting a universe external to ours. Studies of its parallax, however, indicate that it is nearer to us than some of the well-known stars, such as Capella; and Gore, the English astronomer, points out that if the Andromeda nebula were assumed to be an external universe, having a diameter comparable with that of the milky way, its mass would be forty million million times the mass of the sun. This is regarded as incredible and so may be taken as an additional argument in favor of the view that this nebula is a member of our system.—Harper's Weekly.

URGING HIM ON

Jinks—That fellow Slick called me a liar and a scoundrel. Would you advise me to fight him?

Winks—Sure. A man should never hesitate to fight for the truth.

NEW USE FOR A TURNIP.

A small Brighton Beach urchin "put one across" on Charley Gardner, who takes tickets when the Indianapolis Reserves play at the Brighton Beach diamonds. It happened a week or two ago. Gardner was on the gate, as usual, though perhaps not as usual, either. That is, Charley had been out late the preceding night.

It is the custom at the beach to admit small boys who desert their knot holes in the fence to recover foul balls. The ball is a "pass," and when thrust into Gardner's hand it admits the bearer.

Just after a round of cheers from spectators a small figure rushed up to Gardner, thrust something round and smooth into his hand and rushed on right in. A few minutes later Gardner was turning a handful of balls over to Manager Andy Reinhardt. Among them he found a nicely smoothed turnip of about the right weight. There is a turnip patch just across from the diamond.—Indianapolis News.

SEEKS MATE FOR MOTHER.

Setting out to find a good husband for her mother, who wishes to be out on a ranch, "away from the city," is the task a young woman of Kansas City, Mo., has set for herself. She has written a letter to the mayor asking him to have it published in helping on the work she has undertaken, expressly with her mother's consent and approbation. Her letter follows: "I have a mother and I want to find a good husband for her. She has two daughters, one eighteen years of age and the other one seventeen; one son, fourteen. She is a good housekeeper, neat and clean, and the man must have a home and plenty to provide for her. She has made so many wishes to be out on a ranch some place away from the city, and I asked her if I would find her a good husband, if she would have him, and she said 'Yes.' So I thought I would advertise for her. She dresses nice and pretty. Any man writing in answer to this must send photograph."

DIFFERENT.

Mrs. Gramercy—When you look in your husband's pockets do you ever find letters that he has forgotten to mail?

Mrs. Park—No, but I sometimes find ones that he has forgotten to burn.

MAKING A NATIONAL PARK

Persistence and Energy of One Man Saved Crater Lake Region to Country.

One morning in the spring of 1866 a thirteen-year-old boy arrived at a school house in Kansas after a five-mile walk across the prairie. At noon, after eating his lunch, he picked up the crumpled newspaper in which the lunch had been wrapped and in this read what purported to be a description of a wonderful "sunken lake" in Oregon.

It was a sensational, largely imaginative, inaccurate account, but it took such a strong hold on this boy, Will G. Steel, that two years later he arrived in Oregon in quest of this lake. It was not until after nine years of questioning, however, that he at last met a man who had actually seen Crater lake.

In 1885 he himself stood for the first time upon its wild and romantic shore. Before leaving it he resolved to have it made a national park. For years he spent money, time and energy to accomplish this; he went to Washington again and again. In 1902 he triumphed, and the Crater lake region became a national park.

Mr. Steel has had an important place in the forest conservation movement in the northwest from its beginning, and he commenced this agitation in 1886. For a short time in Portland, Ore., he published a little magazine called Steel Points. He is the author of a book, "The Mountains of Oregon," long out of print. It was he who, on the top of Mount Hood, on July 19, 1894, organized the Mazamas, the now famous mountain club of the northwest. Mr. Steel was born in Ohio in 1854 and is now living in Portland.—Country Life in America.

FAST PACE OF BUSY TOWN

Time Passes in an Incredible Manner and Nobody Ever Has Spare Minute.

A young boy eloquently dilating on the delights of the small town in which he lived, the baseball games, fishing, drives, picnics, etc., was interrupted by his listener, who asked curiously:

"But what do you do with yourself in the evening in a place of that sort, where there are no theaters or amusements of any kind?" "Why," answered the youth, "I stand around in the drug store on the corner talking to a lot of fellows, and all of a sudden, I ask 'What time is it?' And what do you think? It's twelve o'clock! Time passes just like that. Never saw anything like it. Gone before you know it. Nobody ever has a spare minute."

CHINESE MARRIAGE.

Marriages in China are celebrated at the home of the bridegroom, not of the bride, says a writer in the May Wide World Magazine. Before quitting her own house the bride is arrayed in her best dress and jewels, her hair is elaborately arranged and she wears a large hat. A mantle is then thrown about her head and a red silk cloth is placed over her face. Her mother then puts her in a gilt sedan chair, used only for weddings, and locks her in, giving the key to one of the attendants, who delivers it to the bridegroom when the procession arrives at the latter's home. No priest or magistrate officiates at the marriage. The happy pair, the bride still veiled, enters the ancestral hall together and bow three times to the family tablets, afterward sitting down to a table on which are two cups of wine—an offering intended to propitiate the ancestors of the family. They next enter the reception chamber, where the husband removes the veil and mantle from his wife, seeing her face, perhaps, for the first time. The guests and friends then enter the room, gaze upon the blushing bride and convey their felicitations to the happy pair. A wedding banquet is held in the evening, at which the bride, very tactfully, pays especial attention to her parents-in-law.

MILLIONS, BUT—

Markley—Skinner has been trying to get me interested in a land boom in New Jersey.

Wiseman—Pshaw! that tract of his is practically worthless. I don't believe anything could ever live there but mosquitoes.

Markley—Ah! I guess that's what he meant; he told me there were millions in it.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Mrs. Powell Almost Dead.

Dry Ridge, Ky.—"I could hardly walk across the room," says Mrs. Lydia Powell, of Dry Ridge, "before I tried Cardui. I was so poorly, I was almost dead. Now I can walk four miles and do my work with much more ease. I praise Cardui for my wonderful cure." Cardui is successful in benefiting sick women, because it is composed of ingredients, that act specifically on the womanly constitution, relieving headache, backache, irregularity, misery and distress. Only a good medicine could show such continual increase in popularity as Cardui has, for the past 50 years. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic.
